DOJ to focus on scams, killings

Acting Secretary Devanadera to also look into old, urgent cases

By Lela B. Schwartz

THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE WILL GIVE PRIORITY to cases involving investment scams and extrajudicial killings, including those of members of the media, under the watch of acting Secretary Agnes Devanadera.

Devanadera, who is also the Solicitor General, said she would work to decrease the backlog of cases at the DOJ and had begun an inventory of the oldest and most urgent cases.

Devanadera said she would be disposed of Devanadera is at the helm of the DOJ in the absence of Secretary Rodolfo Devanadera who is on medical leave.

Devanadera said Chief State

Prosecutor Antonio Dato had proposed the cases according to type to make it easier to see which cases should be taken up first.

"The way I see it now because of the volume of cases, other than the inventory, I think we have to focus more on cases and address the more urgent ones and the old ones regardless of the nature of the case," she said.

Devanadera said that focusing on investment and extrajudicial cases was important given the number of people that have been victimized.

"These are people who have been victimized more than life savings. The thing that other people said not to victimize more and more of our constituents. But I know that from the previous, they are still vulnerable. It's actually the victims' pay of members, or victims (that is affected)," she said.

Among the more recent cases were an extrajudicial killing involving a woman (Dagupan) and a woman (Dagupan) and a woman (Dagupan).

(Dagupan) which allegedly deflected to victims of millions of dollars and thousands, an extrajudicial killing.

Investigation and media killings, on the other hand, are a fairly recent concern, with the government, the military and law enforcement taken to task by critics for failing to solve the killings.

The Supreme Court even issued a writ of habeas corpus to order the extrajudicial killings and extrajudicial disappearances.

The human rights group Amnesty International said that more than 100 people have been killed—allegedly by security forces—since 2003. More than 300 of the victims were taking evidence, it said. At least 100 cases of extrajudicial disappearances had also been reported.

Since 2001, 23 journalists have been killed.

Devanadera, meanwhile, said she would not interfere the number of people working with the DOJ.

"You have to live, but you have to live," she said.

Mendoza tells cadets NBN deal 'all right, sir!'

By Vincent Calvez
Inquirer Northern Luzon

MAJOR GEN. PABLO BICARA (left)—Commander and Commander General of the Philippine Military Academy, told the annual National Broadband Network

(NBN) project was "all right, sir!" when he declared "All right, sir!" during a speech to national leaders with PMA cadets on Saturday.

"All right, sir!" is a cadet tradition that signifies "ready" (admission) that what a fellow cadet is saying is the absolute truth, Big Two, Inquirer Manila, PMA.

speeches, explained on Sunday.

Mendoza did not read his prepared speech, instead, he showed the cadets a copy of a national newspaper published that day. Mendoza is the official who had been seen after the accident.

Mendoza said:

"I told the cadets that it would be okay to ask him 'All right, sir!' because he would respond in the affirmative," Mendoza said. Mendoza is a member of PMA Class 101.

It was the same tradition that Sen. Ruffalo Lacerda, also a PMA alumnus, used to challenge the credibility of the incident. Secretary Lacerda began at the height of the controversy surrounding the alleged misuse of intelligence funds.

But Reyes, another PMA alumnus, did not say to the challenge and instead said he remained "under oath."

"All right, sir!" is part of the tradition among PMA alumni who are obliged to others to the PMA honor system.

The PMA honor code forbids cadets from lying, cheating or stealing, and does not appear to be a code or an oath to which the cadets are sworn.

Mendoza professed the substance of the tradition by describing the tradition of a national broadband network in government, and does not appear to be a code or an oath to which the cadets are sworn.

But he said the real issue "this would be the issue" is that the honor system is more part of the honor system than the honor system.

Mendoza said the cadets were aware of the PMA tradition.

Mendoza had been invited to attend a party at his home, even before the NBN scandal broke out.

He accepted the invitation only after work hours connected with a national issue of the Department of Transportation and Communications' regional offices at Camp John Hay, he said.

ARMM students score lowest in national test

By Jerry E. Kaplan

A NUMBER OF PUBLIC schools in the Department Region of Mindanao (ARMM) were among the poorest performers in the National Achievement Test (NAT).

The results of the NAT, which was conducted last year, showed that students from ARMM schools scored the lowest in the test.

The NAT is a national test that is taken by students in the final year of high school. It is used to determine the placement of students in the different levels of the Department Region of Mindanao (ARMM).

Cooperate, mayor tells BF Homes residents

By Ed Tap

IN ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO SOOTHE THE water wars ailing BF Homes subdivisions, Pasig Mayor Romeo Brando addressed village leaders on the provisions of the BF Homes Water Services to take over the water supply and distribution in the subdivision.

Brando said 18 associations representing 30,000 homeowners were all that were needed to help the process ending, but added that it would be better if all 50 associations participate.

The mayor already presented their position before the Drinking and Sanitation Regulatory Board and the Interoperable Waterworks and Sewerage Systems, but more are expected to follow in the coming days.

On Saturday, Brando met with the 24 Subdivision Association leaders, as well as representatives from Marikina and City of Alabang, in an effort to resolve the long-standing problem.

Among those present were Maynilad Systems manager Regino Cruz, technical services manager Fred Abella, water board president Francisco, city administrator Nelson de Jesus, special services officer Dena Calleja and legal officer Jose Hernandez.

The joint BF Homes has looked possible water supply, prompting residents to long wait from delivery companies at much higher rates.

Brando said he was trying his best to solve the problem but added that the cooperation of the residents was mostly needed.

Vice President Noli de Castro, who was invited, would not make it to the meeting, but Brando said de Castro had promised to take up the matter directly with President Marikina Mayor

Bush faces new political battle over Iraq pullout

WASHINGTON—US PRESIDENT GEORGE W. Bush on Sunday faced a new clash with congressional Democrats over the unpopular war in Iraq as Senate Democrats reportedly reached a deal that would allow soldiers to spend more time at home.

"It was never to be drawn out of Iraq, remnants of all strains would be self-defeating," Bush said Sunday in his weekly radio address. "If Qaida could find new recruits and new resources," he added, naming the movement network that he blames along with Iraq, for fueling violence in Iraq.

"By contrast, a few Iraqis will deny al Qaida's role here. It will ensure the destructive intentions of Iraq, but it will serve as a pattern in the fight against terrorism," he said.

Meanwhile in Washington, thousands of protesters marched from the White House to Congress Sunday, waving placards demanding an end to the war in Iraq, the return of US troops, and the impeachment of Bush.

Opponents and 187 people, including dozens of veterans and activists, were arrested as they crossed police lines. Police parked the number of arrests at 200.

Activists also used pepper spray to disperse the crowd, according to the New York Times. It said Bush (senior) protesters, the group that organized the march.

The president announced in a speech on Thursday that the size of the US force in Iraq would decrease by about 23,000 combat troops by mid-2008, with the last 3,700 soldiers leaving Iraq in December. Most of those soldiers had been scheduled to return back to the United States in that time.

Currently 145,000 US troops are in Iraq, up from 130,000 in late Bush announced a "surge" of US forces in January.

Defense Secretary Robert

Gates, heavily criticized that the all-volunteer US military has been overstressed due to repeated deployments, and further to boost US forces in Iraq can be brought down to about 130,000 by the time the next presidential inauguration in January 2009.

The issue could become easier if Senate Democrats have their way. A proposal by Democratic Sen. Jay Byrd of Virginia's House was introduced in order to determine that would require US troops to spend at least five years at home or on their most recent tour overseas before being redeployed.

The proposal is close to winning enough Republican support for approval, the New York Times reported Sunday. AFP

PROTESTERS stage "No War" protest on Capitol Hill on Sept. 15 in Washington. At least 10 protesters were arrested in this month of demonstrations conducted in the Capitol surrounding an anti-war Iraq war.

Sadr's movement pulls out of Iraq Shiite alliance

BAHREIN—THE POLITICAL MOVEMENT loyal to anti-American cleric Muqtada al-Sadr quit Iraq's ruling Shiite alliance on Sunday, leaving Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki's coalition in a precarious position in parliament.

The move further weakened the ruling coalition, which even before the defection had failed to push through laws aimed at strengthening Iraq's military industry, the oil and minority sectors.

Sadr's government now enjoys the support of only about half of Iraq's 275 lawmakers, although it could survive with the support of a handful of independent lawmakers.

"The political movement has declared the withdrawal of the Iraqi bloc from the (Shiite) alliance because there was no role for us," he said. The demands of Sadr's bloc were being met, he said. Sadr's movement was in a minority, he said, at a news conference in the holy Shiite city of Najaf.

An adviser to Maliki said the government had no immediate comment.

The decision by Sadr's movement to quit the Shiite Alliance in parliament was unexpected after the cleric, pulled his six ministers from the coalition in April.

Maliki can still count on the backing of two other Shiite Islamic parties and the two main Kurdish parties in parliament, and so far no party has launched any push for a re-election vote in the general election.

Sadr was instrumental in getting Maliki, a fellow Shiite, appointed prime minister in May last year.

The political bloc has asked a host of questions to the pact, including Maliki's refusal to use a timetable for the withdrawal of US forces from Iraq.

Sadr, a fiery nationalist, refused to sign the pact in Baghdad's sprawling Shiite city but his Shiite Army militia in two uprisings against US forces in 2004.

Sadr's government has been paralyzed by fighting.

Since the withdrawal of international troops, an cabinet member from the main Shiite Arab bloc have also quit.

Speaking in parliament on Monday, Maliki acknowledged that the term "national government" was used to describe his cabinet had lost its meaning.

Striving at a long promised overhaul of his cabinet, he said it was time for a "post-war government," but gave no details.

The next day Sadr's movement said it was considering withdrawing from the alliance, according to a video to provide security and end political progress had been in progress.

On Sunday evening a suicide car-bomb killed 10 people and wounded 15 others in northwest Baghdad. Many were queuing outside a bakery to buy bread for the evening Ramadan meal which broke the day-long fast during the Muslim holy month.

The bombing came on the same day that al-Qaida had group, the Islamic State in Iraq, announced a new phase of attacks to mark the month of Ramadan, which started this week.

Air21 not giving up on Jaworski

By Henry R. Castillo

SENIOR JAWORSKI WILL ACCEPT PHILADELPHIA's offer to accept the Air21 coaching job in the PBA, reportedly to close the gap in the coming Philippine Cup.

This was the intention of a team official, who asked me to be interviewed, in a talk with the Philippine Star.

"The offer has been on the tip of the tongue in a 'war room' for some time," according to the PBA official, who would double the offer, if it would have been accepted.

Several days ago, the offer was made to the coach, who had been in the PBA since 2003.

From management, he has received a number of offers, but the coach said he would accept the offer from the PBA, as it was the only one that would allow him to stay in the PBA.

The coach also said he would accept the offer from the PBA, as it was the only one that would allow him to stay in the PBA. He also said he would accept the offer from the PBA, as it was the only one that would allow him to stay in the PBA.

"The only thing I see that could prevent Jaworski from taking over the team is if a power-calling coach doing," said the coach.

Jaworski is reportedly being used for a top position in the Philippine Sports Commission and the coaching staff of the PBA.

Alliance Global joins tourism bandwagon

By Elizabeth Sanchez-Larson

ALLIANCE GLOBAL GROUP INC., the leading U.S. of property management and real estate, is venturing into the high-growth tourism business.

AGG president Xingjun Zhu said the company reported the tourism sector which will have a low growth rate in the next three to five years, but it is a very hot sector in the next three to five years.

Taking about 40 percent of the group investment from the company's investment through AGG, AGG is a private equity fund, where AGG holds a 51 percent stake.

As it enters the tourism sector, the site and other businesses in the area and already manufacturing are seen to contribute more to AGG's total revenues in the future, than its existing AGG's contributions.

Zhu said AGG was still making possible business for tourism projects although he said that the firm group owns a 15-hectare property in Mactan, Cebu, which may be developed as a luxury resort.

The company intends to invest in tourism projects to be of the same scale as that of tourism, but in Singapore, middle-class, profit-driven business.

With the increasing spending power of the Philippines, middle-class, profit-driven business.

just buying a house and buying a car.

Maguindao is also doing a deal with the government for the purchase of the 14.5-hectare old hotel property in Marikina, Metro City for P12.5 million to build.

But, however, did not comment on whether that will be part of AGG's investment.

Maguindao had said that since acceptance of his offer and the signing of the deal, the company would apply with the Philippine Economic Zone Authority (PEZA) for a special economic zone license for a project that aims to transform the old hotel property into a new business center.

Maguindao's intention is to provide a better business place for existing (BPO) companies instead of to set up shop in the Visayas region.

In addition to office buildings for the BPO industry, the project will have a commercial building to provide value-added training to give prospective employees with the necessary skills needed in the requirements of the call centers and other BPO industries that will be based in the Maguindao project.

Cautious trade seen ahead of Fed meeting

INVESTORS ARE EXPECTED to closely track Wall Street ahead of a Federal Reserve policy meeting later Sept. 18 that may result in possible interest rate cuts to boost a slowing U.S. economy.

"I think the mood of the market will generally be depressed by the statement of the Fed during the FOMC (Federal Open Market Committee) meeting. The markets are also concerned a rate cut is in the future for doing so will be key," said Geraldine Reid, president at Citigroup's research.

While an initial focus report on a rate cut is expected, whether it will be a quarter percentage point or a half percentage point. The Federal Reserve has kept its benchmark fed funds rate unchanged at 5.25 percent for many years after a string of increases and has not cut its rate since 2003.

An interest rate in the 5.25 percent range is the dollar and bond market's interest rate.

Rita Murga, investment manager at Citigroup's research, said that the market has demonstrated a 25 basis point cut in the benchmarking last meeting but not a 50 basis point cut, which could propel global stock markets up.

"The reaction factor will remain until September get a better hold of (economic) that quarter profile in October," Reid says.

Fund managers and the range in oil prices has been dropped off by investors as they instead focus on a surprise cut by the U.S. Fed.

World crude oil prices have fallen 30 percent since the last time they were at the level last time. Thursday is the last time.

Last Friday light sweet crude for October delivery fell 99 cents to $26.49, for a low on the New York Mercantile Exchange after trading earlier to $26.48, its lowest since 2000.

"The market will likely track the Dow Jones Industrial Index as investors will have to estimate the adverse impact of rising crude oil prices on the stock market," said James J. Gorman, chief investment officer at DWS Investment Management. JPMorgan's research.

BSP to acquire P40B in fresh capital

Gov't plans to issue peso-denominated bonds to raise fund

By Don C. Domingo

THE RANGING CENTRAL BANK RESERVE, steadily swelling from huge foreign exchange income, will soon get two billion in fresh capital in a simple exercise through a sovereign lending scheme that will not strain the national government's finances.

Under the scheme, the government will issue P40 billion worth of 10-year peso-denominated bonds and send all proceeds to the BSP. Later, the government will create a special purpose trust (SPT) entity that shall hold all the funds needed to pay bondholders when the securities mature in 10 years.

According to sources at the government, officials will sign a multi-year obligation to extend P4 billion each year to the SPT. To grow the funds, the money in the SPT will, in turn, be invested in various investments.

In effect, the SPT will become a self-liquidating entity whose only debt is to pay the money every day of the P40 billion bond issue.

"At the end of 10 years, you have money not able to pay for the maturing bond," one source said.

The source declined to say exactly where they plan to find the funds, but he said the scheme has not been included in the 2006 budget. The government is expected to release the report in the BSP in 2007.

"So they began in 2006, the government intervention steps are to define, while in 2005, they're already going to be a surprise," the source said.

Just last year, the BSP's profitability has been under pressure due to losses incurred with the peso's sharp appreciation against the dollar, as well as the beginning of stepping up credit liquidity from the strong inflow of foreign funds, particularly remittances from overseas Filipino workers.

The P40 billion capital infusion is seen to bolster the BSP's capacity to provide monetary stability.

Based on the latest published BSP income statement, the institution incurred P21.7 billion in net losses in the first semester, mostly due to P61.83 billion worth of foreign exchange losses.

IT boom has come and gone, study says

By Elizabeth Sanchez-Larraz

LARGE FIRMS THAT HAVE PROVIDED the global information technology outsourcing boom and have now developing countries such as India and the Philippines as investors' solid anchors are getting to be picky, according to a recent study.

"We do believe that the boom years for IT outsourcing growth have come and gone," said Brian Thompson in a statement. "We are looking to be more selective and strategic in the way they approach outsourcing and, in such, a pace of growth is slowing."

Thompson is co-author of the 2006 Global IT Outsourcing Study conducted by Strategic Management and Technology Consultants (SMTAC), a Chicago-based IT management consulting firm.

SMTAC's study reveals that buyers are still primarily retaining control, and questioning the value of outsourcing. They are also struggling with the issue of determining what to outsource, measuring effectiveness and managing a global pool of resources.

The study further revealed that buyers are becoming more selective and strategic in the way they approach outsourcing decisions, which is slowing the buying process.

Buyers are concerned about security, integration, transitions and uncertainties in such additional outsourcing opportunities.

In 2006, 9 percent of offshore buyers said they plan to decrease their levels of outsourcing over the next 12 months. This is compared to SMTAC's previous study in 2005 in which none of the buyers said they would decrease the amount of outsourcing they were doing.

Firms are moving to outsourcing for three reasons, either they suddenly considered a process or function that is core to their business, and are now bringing them back in-house; their provider underperformed and/or delivered on the complexity of managing and measuring outsourcing projects and relationships overabounded the benefits.

This movement does not signal the death knell for IT outsourcing.

SMTAC said the industry is alive and will continue to grow well into the future, although at a slower pace.

The pace of growth has declined significantly over the past several years. In 2004, 56 percent of all buyers told SMTAC that they were going to increase their level of offshore outsourcing—about a slower pace than in years past. By 2005, that number had slipped to 79 percent and today sits at an all-time low of 64 percent.

The good news is, overall, the percentage of buyers satisfied with their IT outsourcing decisions remains quite high, with 71 percent of buyers saying they were happy with their offshore providers. In 2005, the offshore satisfaction rate was only 62 percent.

The study polled hundreds of senior executives mostly based in the United States and Europe and found industry trends over the past 12 months in the areas of spending, buyer satisfaction, outsourcing impact and leadership of the changing outsourcing market.

Seniority is critical in making a purchase as a preview of global outsourcing trends and strategies for 2007 at the Global Strategic Sourcing on Oct. 2.

WESM operator urges ERC to reverse ruling

By Abigail L. Ho

DETERRED TO ACQUIT A POSSIBLE P2.40-BILLION loss increase in consumer power lines in Luzon, the Philippine Electricity Market Corp. (PEMC) operator of the wholesale electricity spot market, is urging the Energy Regulatory Commission to reverse a recent ruling in a similar case.

The original PEMC settlement price in September and October 2006 was decreased by the National Power Corp. in favoring the original settlement price, because based on the settlement price of the 2006-2007 season.

Due to the ERC has reduced the prices to their original high figures, which prompted the PEMC to file a motion for reconsideration last Friday.

In its motion, the PEMC urged the ERC to reconsider its Aug. 14 decision, saying the rescheduled prices would only burden consumers. It said power buyers at the electricity market would be forced to pass on to their customers the additional costs brought on by the increase in settlement prices in September and October 2006.

"Considering that the implementation of the operational decisions would surely have a huge impact on the consumers, there is a need to immediately suspend the effectivity of the said decision until after the ... case review has resulted the final decision for reconsideration," PEMC said.

Teves steps in to resolve opposing CTPL proposals

By Michael V. Kama

FINANCE SECRETARY MARGARETO

Teves said was step into the fray over the compulsory third-party liability (CTPL) and work on a compromise between the private insurance industry and the regulatory agencies.

Teves said he would schedule a meeting this week with Transportation Secretary Landolt Womack, representatives of the Philippine Insurance and Reinsurance Association Inc. (PIRA), Insurance Commission (IC) and Malabo and other parties involved.

During the proposed meeting, Teves hopes that all parties will get to clarify and find differences over the CTPL, problems and agree on a solution.

The conflict arose from a proposal for the Government Service Insurance System to become the sole provider of CTPL insurance, and eliminate the current sale of third insurance policies to vehicle owners.

The Department of Transportation and Communication (DOTC) backs the GSI proposal.

The Insurance Commission, which is still reviewing the feasibility, opposed the GSI model, saying it would displace private insurance firms from the CTPL business. The Insurance Commission, however, seemed to waver when the GSI was asked and replaced by Malabo Malabo.

The Insurance Commission, represented by PIRA, also opposed the GSI model, saying that a monopoly was unconstitutional. PIRA added that the GSI model of CTPL would increase the cost of insurance.

PIRA brought the matter to the Makati City Regional Trial Court, which has now issued a preliminary injunction on the DOTC order to implement the GSI model. The government must while implemented a so-called "interim solution" that was earlier agreed upon by the DOTC and Insurance Commission.

PIRA said it is an earlier agreement that the interim solution had resulted in the increase in sale of third insurance policies. PIRA added that there was no need for the Insurance Commission to make an implementing order to implement the interim solution.

But Malabo had said he found the GSI model to be superior to addressing PIRA. He added the commission would immediately implement the GSI model, about the next decade in Malabo.

DA plans avian flu fund from gamefowl revenues

By Amy R. Ramon

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE is considering the possibility of setting up an Avian Influenza defense fund from poultry gamefowl revenues. Agriculture Secretary Arthur C. Rupar said on Friday that the DA was looking into the idea of tapping the P50-billion gamefowl industry as a possible source of funds to combat the dreaded H5N1.

DA is already in talks with the National Federation of Gamefowl Breeders to put the proposed law into action.

The DA defense fund will be used to finance strengthening efforts of the DA and the Bureau of Animal Industry to keep the country free from H5N1. With the country as the only bird-free, free country in Southeast Asia, Rupar said, local poultry owners and growers were in a position to expand their export markets.

Rupar explained that Singapore and Thailand could not be considered free of the dreaded Avian Influenza, because they do not have poultry industries to speak of.

Gamefowl breeders, along with the whole poultry sector, would directly benefit from the DA fund, which would be used for various programs such as disease containment and prevention and control programs.

Currently, the DA is setting up eleven new 10-day quarantine laboratories in the cities of Cagayan de Oro, Cebu and Zamboanga. These additional laboratories, once completed, will complement the ongoing work being done at the Regional Avian Influenza Diagnostic Laboratory in Pangasinan, the country's first diagnostic facility that can promptly detect the A/H5N1.

As for now, the DA is looking on the quick turnaround planting program to help increase production and lower the cost of poultry feed.

Com, a major ingredient in animal feeds. Rupar said he had ordered the DA and Livestock Development Council to look into drafting a compensation and insurance program, which can be an incentive for farmers and producers who would voluntarily report any outbreaks.

The insurance can also be used for poultry losses that will be hit by any disease or virus.

Rupar added that the DA had sought partnerships with local governments for the prompt detection of any disease outbreak.

18TH MARKETING & SALES IMPLEMENTATION

(BY JOSIAH GO)
 OCT. 4-5, 2007 (8:30 A.M. TO 5:30 P.M.) MANGHEIM ORIENTAL HOTEL, MARKET CITY

Convert your marketing plan into outstanding performance!

You are the manager of a marketing or sales team. In this day and age, you are multi-talented and you are more than just a salesperson — planner, implementer, motivator, collaborator, coach and negotiator all at the same time. You face uncertainties and have limited time to act in an increasingly fast-paced environment. How do you get the job done right and promptly the first time?

You face new challenges like increasing marketing and sales strategy into a meaningful connection with your people getting commitment from the sales force and clients, communicating to subordinates, open as well as honest. You are also faced to make quick decisions based on incomplete information, yet when happens if you "drop the ball" and wear the lighting, slowing things down instead of doing things that really makes the difference in the long run?

In the end, it comes down to building marketing capabilities in order to have excellence in sales. It's not just a competitive advantage, bringing to life the marketing plan, as well as selling better and outperforming the best.

For eco advocates, light at the end of the tunnel

By Amy B. Rowe

In cutting energy spent on lighting by 40%, 555 million tons of CO<sub>2</sub> will be kept from the atmosphere

SAVING THE ENVIRONMENT can be as easy as changing a light bulb.

That is, replacing incandescent bulbs with energy-saving lamps can help save the world from global warming, according to Philips Electronics and Lighting Inc.

"It might seem trivial to some people, but the reality is that switching from incandescent to compact fluorescent (CFL) bulbs not only is considerable power savings, but also is a more sustainable future for everyone," said Peter Shiang-Wing, general manager of Philips Lighting Philippines.

Conserving energy and saving the environment, he said, does not have to be a hard choice.

Thus, through "Savings of the World," Philips and the United Nations Fund for Women Philippines have sought to engage the public in "simple" energy-conserving solutions to global warming.

The four-day energy management event, which kicked off on Thursday, aims to educate the public on the benefits of energy-efficient lighting and other practices to help address critical environmental challenges.

"Our goal is to create awareness that is direct, global warming and climate change is happening, and to ultimately encourage even Filipinos, community and government to take action," Shiang-Wing said.

Consumers all over the world have begun feeling the devastating impact of global warming through floods, droughts and the melting of glaciers.

In particular, the Philippines is extremely vulnerable to climate change, which can cause food and fresh water shortages, increasing sea levels, drought, among others. In response, Shiang-Wing explained that globally, lighting accounts for 10 percent of electricity consumption.

Meanwhile, 75 percent of the world's light bulbs are still inefficient technology such as incandescent lighting.

"By year 2030, we would be consuming 60 percent more energy if we continue with our current practices," Shiang-Wing said.

"Therefore, action is very simple: eliminate inefficient and costly incandescent lighting today by switching to Philips' energy-efficient compact fluorescent lamps (CFL)," he added.

In terms of environmental care, Shiang-Wing said that saving energy consumption on lighting could consequently reduce carbon dioxide emissions resulting from burning fossil fuels for electricity generation.

Greenhouse gas emissions contribute largely to global warming.

Meanwhile, energy-efficient bulbs also use less energy than traditional incandescent bulbs.

Studies have pointed out that, in using energy currently spent on lighting by 40 percent, 355 million tons of carbon dioxide would be kept from being released to the atmosphere.

This translates to savings of up to 1,040 million barrels of oil a year—equivalent to the annual energy output of 120 power plants.

According to Shiang-Wing, this can be crucial since global demand for energy is likely to increase by 50 percent from the present until 2030. Over 70 percent of this increase will come from developing countries, led by China and India.

Hot property sector shows no sign of cooling down

By Elizabeth Sanchez-Lucan

HAS THE PHILIPPINE PROPERTY sector lost its sheen as financial markets cool down after the subprime mortgage fiasco in the United States?

In 2005, property companies and analysts headed the race of a property boom—which had been going on since 1997—largely due to a growing outsourcing industry that has spurred demand for office space, very low interest rates on housing loans, and an increasing appetite for homes from overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

Overstated fears

Two years later, industry analysts still believe that property investments are still a hot item, as evidenced by endless land and even overseas demand even if subprime mortgages have upended credit access in the US, considered a relatively important market for home buyers of Philippine properties.

Market fears of a loss of a major growth driver in terms of residential sales from OFWs are, by far, also overstated, analysts said.

Subprime mortgages are mortgages granted to a borrower with a less than perfect credit report or those who have other debts or have been late in payments on a debt. The loss of subprime loans is that it doesn't require collateral.

Concerns about the massive housing and mortgage markets have swept the globe in

Ayala breaks 'green' ground Developer forms partnership with WWF

By Gil C. Cabanatuan Jr.

THE COUNTRY'S PREMIERE LAND DEVELOPER, Ayala Land Inc., is breaking "green" ground in its 1,700-hectare, Cabiling commercial project in Laguna.

Ayala Land has formed a partnership with the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) to provide the property with a unique perspective in dealing the blueprint for an eco-friendly, energy-efficient community at par with the world's best.

Ayala Land president Ben Ayala said, "We are doing a very holistic approach to this because at the end of the day, we're talking about a different way of looking at a project. It's very hard to make that change unless you are a holisticist."

Ayala said that part of Ayala Land's business is to build communities that work properly and flourish over time. "The easiest thing to do is to build a project, it is as large as the project, it, without fully understanding these issues," said Ayala.

Jon Ma. Laraman, CEO, president of WWF Philippines, said, "The challenge to most is the expertise of sustainability. Institutionally, developers look at ecological footprint and social equity. Our help comes in terms of bringing technologies and expertise to partners to figure out how to make their own lives."

"It's not only a groundbreaking development, it is a groundbreaking vision to resource organizations that are leaders in their respective fields. It's a unique collaboration, between business and for-profit organizations," said Ayala Land senior vice president Lucita Aguirre.

agreements," said Ayala Land senior vice president Lucita Aguirre.

Professor P. Mariano, Ayala Land of operations, said, "We are looking at the project as a long-term project. It's about more than just the land. It's about the future of the land."

Jon said Ayala Land was not satisfied with just complying with national building standards and meeting requirements like the National Building Code (NBP), which is acceptable in the Philippines but not in other parts of the world.

Jon said the whole idea was to figure out how to make sustainability a reality. Mariano also said Ayala Land chose WWF over the natural resource advisors because it looks at environmental issues from a bigger perspective.

Seasoned actor Greg Kinnear has always been sensitive to the way things within our world, and his improved art reveals the secret of an actor's desire that has inspired people over the centuries.

In "Paradise," we see a half-studio house, one probably about to take a bath in its own rain. Like has reason not to be invited—after all, to paradise one is not afraid of one's nakedness. The hopes to regain the freedom where the air is so sweet as the harbor's breeze, in the world of plenty where all our needs are met. This is perhaps why Bolander is more subject to the first as depicted in such works as "Superman" and "Gains." This reminds us of the ethnic plights we have either repressed or forgotten.

La Naval memorabilia on exhibit

THE MUSEO DE FOLK DOMINIO de San Domingo Church and Convent in Quito, Ecuador is mounting the period exhibit "La Naval Memorabilia Exhibit," which opens on Sept. 20. The exhibit is a fitting tribute to Our Lady of the Rosary, La Naval de Manila on the centenary of her coronation coronation.

It takes just a series of eight exhibitions which began in 2006 to commemorate the coronation. In the launching of the exhibition last year, the first exhibit, "La Virgen de Manila," inspired the artistic direction in the child Mary in the Philippines. It was followed by "Nuestra Señora," which featured the various Marian images in the Philippines, which have been creatively combined.

Last December, the exhibit "Nuestra Señora" focused on the very popular devotion to the five Marys as depicted in various art forms such as prints and coverage in word and song and the many titles of the Gloriosa Philippine popular religious.

In March 2007, a book-to-book exhibit was presented to honor St. Joseph, husband of Mary, in San Juan, Bayamo de la Virgen and "Mariano Dela Cruz," which featured various depictions of the suffering Our Lady along with the scenes of Lamentation and Crucifixion.

The sixth exhibit was exhibited last month to honor the order of the rosary, "San Domingo de Guzman." The exhibit focused on the life of St. Domingo and also included analysis, prints and paintings of other famous members of the Order of Preachers.

The presidential exposition opened last Sept. 25, when of Maria Huayco and is still ongoing at the Instituto Nacional Paralelo of the University of Santo Tomas Campus in Manila, where the coronation image of La Naval stood for a while during the war. The exhibit features some rare photographs and prints of the virgin during the war as well as different images of the Santo Rosario as it evolved through the years.

The grand memorabilia exhibit will open on Sept. 20 and will close the week of October. According to Fr. Emmanuel Rosales, OFM, it was in 2007 when the coronation image of the Holy Mother was unveiled and the coronation of the Filipino people. The Lady of La Naval was the very first image featured with a coronation coronation by Pope Pius II.

The grand exposition will feature various Producers, designers Gloria Rosales and Anna Rosales have also featured their La Naval prints and framed images for the exhibit.

The other members of the exhibit team are Tom Aron, Aron de Aron, Noel Maguila and Ana Rosales.

In charge of research is Rev. Christopher Thompson, OP, said assisted by Rev. Aron Rosales.

Invited to open the grand exhibit are Jesus Lara, Clara Torres, Rosal Aron and Rosales.

Those who wish to see the exhibit will be invited to see the exhibit.

A very rare portrait of a statue of the 1907 Coronation was acquired by Rosales from the Manila General Hospital's religious museum. A more recent find is a sculpture of the Third Order of St. Dominic, which he found in an unopened box in Cebu, QC.

Commemorative medals are also included in the exhibit to be exhibited. An added attraction of this exhibit are some of the gifts given by the donors and benefactors of the Holy Mother of La Naval.

Tender Mother, in stone we carve our thanks

IVE ALWAYS THOUGHT A PRAGMATIC, for some unknown reason, I would find them at roadside garages selling their car-washed home in Laguna, and as garages sprang up together with them.

What I love about them is that they look better as they age, as more years grow on their faces. I remember how anyone could shape figures out of such hard stone, and admire the artistry of Filipino.

So I went to search of the lagest stone artisans. I took the several years to find one. When I did, I was surprised by his youth, and his true home, not where you would imagine could work with heavy stones.

He is the husband. He learned how to carve stone from his father, who started out as an agent recruiting for artisans from home to home, and selling them to foreign dealers.

When the demand for antique-style gifts became of landscapes, the artist hand-carved his hand at making them himself, and was quite successful. The artist stone sells in quite a bit, prompting him to transfer his home to his own.

As the market became saturated with replicas, the artist started experimenting with other forms of more unique, forms they would see in their natural environment, such as trees, birds, turtles.

When the artist hand-carved a turtle, it was his who continued the work. The work was unique, and unpredictable. To make such more, he would take on odd jobs as construction worker, gardener, security guard, whatever he could find.

The legacy of Luciano Pavarotti

Pavarotti's singing is anchored on sound-technical grounding and sensitive artistry.

LUCIANO PAVAROTTI (1928-2007) had reached a larger audience than any of today's operatic celebrities through not only the legitimate stage but also television. He was the first singer to really tap the media, notably TV for opera and music.

It was in 1979 when he resided at the Metropolitan Theatre in New York, where he landed his on a Sunday at 4 p.m., that was seen by an estimated 12 million viewers. This was followed by many more, among which were the celebrated performances he shared with two other actors, Joel Grey and Plácido Domingo. Added "Three

In March 1992, the country's music lovers heard him in a concert at the Philippine International Convention Center sponsored by Hiramatsu "Billy" Ayres. The concert had to be underbilled as Pacquiao had a terrible bout with cold. Rarely recovered from it, he leaned through the concert and emerged victorious.

I witnessed how the audience gave him greatest applause, as he managed to sing through the high notes without any hitch, even if it was obvious his vocal production did not carry the same brilliant glow.

Earlier, at the press conference, I was accused by the hostess, as he expressed the subject desire to say, for a charitable cause, sounding more like a philanthropist than a self-assessed thief.

It was an extraordinary concert, indeed. The company's music lovers had this singular opportunity to listen to him live. While he performed the so-called "absolute canon," the rich and vibrant textures of a live voice, like that of Chagall's or Stravinsky when he achieved to match his "color" or light to sound, never allowed oneself to be of an eternal melody to go up the high register.

In 1974, he became the darling of opera fans in New York after watching him in the high C note (even with a translatable ease) to capture the idea of Puccini in Chagall's own art opera La Ville du Drogman. Since then, he had earned the sobriquet "King of the High C."

Rules of singing

Like many other singers, Peruzzi believed in some fundamental rules in singing. Knowing these basics is the key to understanding classical singing and appreciating his singing even more. There he outlined and discussed in an article he wrote, "The Greatest Self-Improvement."

Four is the "breviary" Gaud sings

As the Internet integrates more and more with the lives of billions of people, expectations of what a good one should offer will be increasingly independent of any business service.

Given all the days of having to Google one Internet site or the business center in order to keep connected, it is not common for visitors to bring their laptops or Internet-ready PDAs along with them, and they expect their hosts to have the information necessary to help them.

This is true not only for business lenders, whose need for financial assets is obvious. Even for an institution as credit-hungry as a mortgage lender, the ability to clearly explain the value of their role, and also of its size,

"I.E. White says, 'Well, everything in life is something else, and you get there in a way.'" said PLIC MVP and Head of Corporate Business Group Eric R. Albright. "This was in 1980. In our era, everything is like - even when you are on vacation - is within your reach, and you get there through the Internet. People want that ability whenever they are."

How far you vary might mean all the demand.

"Internet access is one of the top three priorities for inspectors, even for those going to remote destinations," says Mr. Philippe Guethmann, general manager for the Internet library event, FindIt's. "They want connectivity - they want access to their e-mails."

They can also bring their laptops and use the beach and common areas with them, and their service continues seamlessly, operating on the same account, instead of needing to set up multiple accounts and having to log on and off constantly.

In New York last week, the Australian Prime Minister reported the landing of Frank Ledger and Michelle Williams, who have a 12-year-old daughter, Madison. All quoted Williams' father, Larry, a prominent comic writer based in Australia who has been US on prison charges—as killing his wife. The Daily Telegraph: "I had no idea she was his and I'm his, and hope they will find what they were able."

Rihanna, JT strike gold at MTV video awards

LAD MAG—THE NEW ERA of film and pop music as Justin Timberlake won the big award at the recent MTV Video Music Awards.

Rihanna picked up the most-watched video of the year award and Monster Single of the Year for her "Umbrella," usually known as "Umbrella." Justin Timberlake, rapper Kanye West and Patrick (and singer) Justin Timberlake.

"New Video of the Year: This was definitely the most impressive one for me of the night... the most unexpected for me," Rihanna said, accepting the top

Moore, in the introduction ceremony on the network.

"Timberlake, whose 'What Goes Around... Comes Around' won't be the only one to win the 2007 MTV Video Music Awards."

Underground Chicago (the new) Full On Boy—also a performer in the 2007 MTV Video Music Awards—picked up the Best Group Award.

"BLACK INHERENT," WILLIAMS' NEW dramatized film about modern racism, has been limited by Chicago Tribune critic Michael Phillips as one of the best movies in the season.

the Sept. 10 issue of the Tribune, Phillips described "Indians as 'a species different' from a disease 'who make the disease' allies and creating deprivations of. Mania come to something like."

Phillips added "Guns like a mini-Buster film with high-velocity high-decibel camera, it says. But one actually analyzed it, claiming to be a group of people" and "God himself."

The movie was shot with a hidden camera during the annual Chicago Boat
C on the Mack River.

Four lives woven together by the threads of time

As children, they individually survived the Korean War.

As adults, they will walk the ramp back into each other's lives during the booming fashion world of the '70s.

A stylized logo for 'Fashion 70s'. The word 'Fashion' is in a bold, rounded, sans-serif font. Below it, the number '70s' is rendered in a large, 3D, blocky font with a grid-like texture. The entire logo is set against a dark, circular background with a subtle pattern.

MARTIN NEVERA, WOKEN into the room and barked: "All right, who made it... who made it through the rain?"

A champagne had deflated the arrival of the entertainment media for the launch of Martin's new album, the double CD "Sole Survivor" (EMI Music), which marks his 20th anniversary in show biz.

The singer-TV host usually didn't get to finish the proper, here he was on getting the champagne to celebrate a star in Las Vegas, a town celebrated by a little anniversary.

Martin, 41, had done the hotel-stay in Vegas three years ago, and was prepared to do it again. It seemed he was ready to settle down in Vegas, too, with current partner Tatiana Orosco and son Justin.

"I wanted other producers there to see me," he says now. "That was my plan."

Why is Martin so far from home? He doesn't know. These used to be looked down on as desperate. A prime example was Rita Hayworth, whose Vegas stay
